

Week 1 - Introduction to Data Wrangling with Python

1. Install the latest versions of either Docker or Anaconda. Your book Data Wrangling with Python uses Docker, however, you are welcome to use whichever distributor you feel comfortable with.
2. Create a Jupyter notebook where you create a list, iterate over the list and sort your results, generate random numbers, add to the list, and then print your results.

In [1]: `import random`

new_list=[]
new_list = [random.randint(-10, 30) for x in range (-10, 10)]
new_list.sort()
new_list

Out[1]: [-8, -7, -6, -5, -4, -2, 2, 6, 6, 7, 16, 17, 19, 20, 22, 26, 27, 27, 28, 30]

1. Create a line chart with Matplotlib and the following data file. a. Data file: world-population.xlsm b. (Hint: Python for Data Analysis 2nd Edition: Page 19-50, Python for Data Analysis 3rd Edition: Page 281 & Data Wrangling with Python: Preface)

In [2]: `import pandas as pd`
`import matplotlib.pyplot as plt`

```
world_population_df = pd.read_excel('world-population.xlsm')
world_population_df

```
world_population_df.plot(x='Year', y='Population')
plt.title('World Population')
plt.xlabel('Year')
plt.ylabel('Population')

Out[2]: Text(0, 0.5, 'Population')

4. Complete the following activities:

Activity 1: Handling Lists

In this activity, we will generate a list of random numbers and then generate another list from the first one, which only contains numbers that are divisible by three. Repeat the experiment three times. Then, we will calculate the average difference of length between the two lists. These are the steps for completing this activity:

1. Create a list of 100 random numbers.
2. Create a new list from this random list, with numbers that are divisible by 3.
3. Calculate the length of these two lists and store the difference in a new variable.
4. Using a loop, perform steps 2 and 3 and find the difference variable three times.
5. Find the arithmetic mean of these three difference values.

Activity 2: Analyze a Multiline String and Generate the Unique Word Count

This section will ensure that you have understood the various basic data structures and their manipulation. We will do that by going through an activity that has been designed specifically for this purpose. In this activity, we will do the following:

- Get multiline text and save it in a Python variable
- Get rid of all new lines in it using string methods
- Get all the unique words and their occurrences from the string
- Repeat the step to find all unique words and occurrences, without considering case sensitivity

Activity 3: Permutation, Iterator, Lambda, List

In this activity, we will be using permutations to generate all possible three-digit numbers that can be generated using 0, 1, and 2. Then, loop over this iterator, and also use isinstance and assert to make sure that the return types are tuples. Also, use a single line of code involving dropwhile and lambda expressions to convert all the tuples to lists while dropping any leading zeros (for example, (0, 1, 2) becomes [1, 2]). Finally, write a function that takes a list like before and returns the actual number contained in it. 50 | Advanced Data Structures and File Handling These steps will guide you to solve this activity:

1. Look up the definition of permutations and dropwhile from itertools.
2. Write an expression to generate all the possible three-digit numbers using 0, 1, and 2.
3. Loop over the iterator expression you generated before. Print each element that's returned by the iterator. Use assert and isinstance to make sure that the elements are of the tuple type.
4. Write the loop again using dropwhile with a lambda expression to drop any leading zeros from the tuples. As an example, (0, 1, 2) will become [0, 2]. Also, cast the output of dropwhile to a list.
5. Check the actual type that dropwhile returns.
6. Combine the preceding code into one block, and this time write a separate function where you will pass the list generated from dropwhile, and the function will return the whole number contained in the list. As an example, if you pass [1, 2] to the function, it will return 12. Make sure that the return type is indeed a number and not a string. Although this task can be achieved using other tricks, we require that you treat the incoming list as a stack in the function and generate the number by reading the individual digits from the stack.

Activity 4: Design Your Own CSV Parser

We can convert the data in the preceding table into a Python dictionary, which would look as follows:

1. Import `zip_longest` from `itertools`. Create a function to zip header, line and `fillvalue=None`.
2. Open the accompanying `sales_record.csv` file from the GitHub link by using `r` mode inside a `with` block and first check that it is opened.
3. Read the first line and use string methods to generate a list of all the column names.
4. Start reading the file. Read it line by line.⁶⁰ | Advanced Data Structures and File Handling
5. Read each line and pass that line to a function, along with the list of the headers. The work of the function is to construct a dict out of these two and fill up the key:values. Keep in mind that a missing value should result in `None`.
